Seeing in the New Year – HEALTHY EYES IN 2015

Children don't always tell you if there's a problem, so difficulties with vision may go unnoticed. Tests designed for young people, including pre-school age, can check that both eyes are working well, and that colour vision is OK.

Children's visual needs change quickly, and most use electronic devices such as game consoles, tablets and phones every day.

A full eye check is paid for by the health service up to age 16, and NHS vouchers can cover or help with the cost of children's glasses.

1 in every 20 drivers can't see clearly behind the wheel.

All they need is an eye test.

Book in for a comprehensive vision check today!

Problems with night driving? Try an anti-reflection coating.
